The screenshot shows the homepage of Vote IQ, a social networking site for politics. At the top left is the logo "vote iq" with the tagline "Your Political Network". Navigation links include "Community", "Hot Topics", "Politicians", and "Match". A search bar is on the right with "Everything" selected. Below the navigation is a "Join Now" button. The main content area features a large graphic with the text "POLITICS AS UNUSUAL" and a "Take a Peek" button. To the right is a video player titled "What is Vote IQ?" showing a man speaking. Below the video are two promotional boxes: one for a quiz "Are you liberal or conservative?" and another for a "Politician Match" feature. At the bottom of the main area are logos for "cnet", "YAHOO!", "Forbes", and "TheStreet.com". A footer contains "vote iq" logo, a list of links (Contact Us, About, Careers, Press Room, Privacy Policy, Terms of Use, Site Feedback, Report Abuse, Directory, Help, Blog), and social media icons for Facebook and Twitter. Copyright text at the bottom reads "© 2010 Vote IQ all Rights Reserved. All other copyrights are property of their respective holders."

An advertisement for Vote IQ. It features a hand writing the equation  $1+1=2$  on a chalkboard. Below the equation, the text reads "It's a simple equation. Smarter Voters = Smarter Politics". At the bottom is the "vote iq" logo with the tagline "Your Political Platform" and a "LEARN MORE" button.

about rob christianson

Rob Christianson has been practicing design, typography and illustration for pretty much all of his life, he just didn't know it until high school. He studied at Seattle's renowned School of Visual Concepts and has had over twelve years of professional experience at several leading creative firms- HL2, HighPoint Solutions, Media Partners and recently the new political social media site Vote iQ.

Rob is happily married, has two great kids who now share his last name and works out of his home in the breathtaking shadow of Mt. Rainier. He loves good coffee, classic animation, Star Wars, children's books, Apple Computers and most importantly, Jesus Christ.
